03 Imported fame vs. platform-built fame

The key finding from ranking India's top female Instagram accounts.

Ranking female Indian Instagram accounts strictly by follower count, the very top of the list is dominated by names like Jannat Zubair, Arishfa Khan, and Avneet Kaur who are not "influencers" in the strict sense. Below them come people generally understood to be actual influencers (Dolly Singh, Kusha Kapila, Prajakta Koli, Dharna, etc.) with far smaller followings, sometimes 1M vs 30-50M.

Type	Who	How the audience was built
Imported fame	Jannat Zubair, Arishfa Khan, Avneet Kaur	Started as child actors on Indian television, a mass-reach legacy medium that pushes content to a household whether or not anyone sought it out. Their fanbase pre-existed Instagram and migrated over: Instagram inherited their fame, it did not build it.
Platform-built (native) fame	Dolly Singh, Kusha Kapila, Prajakta Koli	No prior mass-media platform. Audience built entirely through the platform's own discovery mechanics: Reels, shares, algorithmic push, word of mouth. This is what the industry actually means by "influencer".

IMPLICATION FOR AN AI INFLUENCER

We have no legacy TV fanbase to import — we are building platform-native fame by definition, which means the engagement-based / native creators (Kusha, Dolly, Prajakta, Niharika) are the more relevant playbook to reverse-engineer, not the reach-based child-actor accounts.

Moj / ShareChat

Pros
The audience is the right fit: it is genuinely where our tier-2/tier-3 target audience lives. Around 68-70% of Moj's users come from tier-2 cities, almost an exact match for who we are trying to reach, and Zupee's own user base skews the same way.
A high frequency of AI-generated content is already on the platform, which could work in our favour as an AI-led account.

Cons
No accurate current data on content composition: the platform doesn't publish it, so this is based on direct observation of the app rather than reported figures.
A large share of content is short-drama series, matching the QuickTV / micro-drama trend flagged earlier as the platform's real growth area.
A lot of content is reposted specifically, videos of female influencers reposted from other platforms rather than original Moj content
Independent creators are reposting their own Instagram Reels onto Moj but getting barely any views weak organic reach for outside content brought in
Because of this, many of these creators end up promoting their Instagram account within the Moj post itself suggesting even creators active on Moj see it as secondary, not primary
Roughly only 1 in 20 accounts is an independent creator with frequent posting and genuinely satisfactory views/followers —real, healthy creator accounts are a small minority
This means the "large creator base" numbers cited earlier likely include a lot of low-activity, repost-heavy, or dormant accounts not 12-15 million genuinely active creators

BOTTOM LINE

Repost Instagram Reels content to Moj as well, to reach a broader and more accurate audience.

Snapchat

A very small pool of snapchat native creators in India who have above 1M followers, without fame being imported from other platforms. These creators do not have much followers on other platforms compared to their snapchat numbers. Others who are popular on snapchat were already popular on other platforms and built their fame from something other than snapchat. This second category of non snapchat native creators have good crossover follower amount on various platforms. In conclusion, Snapchat shouldn't be our main focus, however we can crosspost.

Snapchat-native creator	Followers
Riddhi Siddhi	9.6M
Pari Rana	7M
Pari Singh	4.9M
Riya Thakur	2.3M
Devisha Singh	5.3M
Reet Narula	2M
Shivani	2.8M
Muskan Affandi	1.8M

WhatsApp Channels

On Indian WhatsApp Channels the top human creators are mainstream celebrities who brought existing fame over, not people who grew there natively: musicians (Diljit Dosanjh, Neha Kakkar), film stars (Katrina Kaif, Allu Arjun, Vijay Deverakonda) and a celebrity chef (Ranveer Brar). No aesthetic or lifestyle-niche creators, human or AI, show up in the rankings yet. That space is empty but also unproven as a growth channel; it is only really useful as a retention / conversion tool once a creator already has an audience elsewhere.

Story arc

Anamika is a small-town girl from Mathura who dreams of becoming an actress and moves to Mumbai to chase it. She struggles through auditions, rejections, friendships and the realities of making it in the city while sharing the little moments of her life with her audience. Slowly, she gets noticed and lands her first major break, taking her from an aspiring newcomer to a rising face in the industry. As fame brings opportunities, parties, premieres and a glimpse into Bollywood, she also faces the pressure and compromises that come with success. Through it all, she stays rooted in her Mathura identity while figuring out what kind of actress — and person — she wants to become.

Content strategy: a trial-and-error start

Section	Content direction
Objective	Initially, we are looking at the content calendar as a trial-and-error phase. The main aim is to first establish who Anamika is, while simultaneously testing what type of content can actually help us attract an audience.
Core Storyline	For now, the basic storyline we are establishing is that Anamika is a 22-year-old girl from Mathura, passionate about dance, who aspires to move to Mumbai and become an actress. We don't want to establish everything about her personality and content pillars from Day 1. Instead, we first want to see what gets people to discover her.
Initial Content Approach	Start with dance reels as one of the main discovery formats. This is based on what we have seen work for Naina Avtr, where dance/visual content can act as a strong initial audience-acquisition format.
If Dance Works	If dance reels start getting good views, engagement and follower growth, we can continue using dance as the initial hook, while slowly bringing in more of Anamika's personality and storyline.
If Dance Doesn't Work	We don't necessarily continue forcing the same format. We can use the initial results to test other content directions. One of the areas we have identified is content created by women that has strong male-audience crossover. From our research, gaming/internet culture particularly Payal Gaming is an interesting format to test here.

Section	Content direction
Personality Establishment	Once we have some indication of what is helping us attract an audience, we can shift the focus towards why people should actually follow Anamika. This is where we start introducing situational content, relatable/humorous situations, POVs and reactions, the best-friend archetype, recurring situations/storylines, and more candid, everyday moments.
Personality References	These formats will be developed using the personality references we identified particularly Shehnaaz Gill and Niharika NM while creating our own version for Anamika.
Long-Term Content Direction	Once we understand what attracts people + what personality-led content they respond to, we can move into establishing Anamika's proper long-term content pillars: Lifestyle + Personality/POV + Humour/Relatability + Fashion/Glamour + Dance/Entertainment + Dating/Social + GRWM/Beauty + Gaming + Travel/Aspiration.

09 Funnel structure & first two weeks

Draft plan; feedback required.

Stage	Who it's for	Goal	Measured by	Primary platforms	Approx. weekly mix
TOFU (Awareness)	Total strangers who don't know Anamika yet	Get seen; watchable with zero context or backstory. Includes gaming/entertainment clips AND regional/local-language content, since both travel well to a tier-2/tier-3 audience without needing prior relationship.	Views, new followers, shares	Shorts, Moj, instagram/fb	~50%
MOFU (Relationship)	People who already follow her but haven't bonded yet	Make her feel like an actual person, not just a face.	Comments, DMs, story replies, repeat viewers	Instagram/fb, snapchat	~35-40%
BOFU (Conversion)	People already attached following - engaging, feeling something	Ask them to do something (open the Zupee app), framed as earned, not an ad.	Link clicks, installs tied back to her	Zupee app	~5-10%
